

D.C. Farm to School Week, October 3-7, 2011

The third annual D.C. Farm to School Week will be a celebration of local, seasonal food in Washington, DC schools! Participating schools will feature locally-grown food in school meals, and engage students in hands-on food and farm education. The week will start with a battling-chef kick-off celebration at Thurgood Marshall Academy Public Charter High School in Southeast, DC, also marking the start of the first ever National Farm to School Month.

Support healthy kids, healthy farms, and healthy communities!

farm field trips · chef demonstrations · urban farm tours farmers in the classroom · community film screenings

Learn more about the event at www.dcfarmtoschoolweek.org

"[Students] were introduced to where vegetables really come from. Now they may be willing to explore something different, something they may not have tried before."

- Angela Tilghman, Principal at Garfield Elementary, describing D.C. Farm to School Week last year

D.C. Farm to School Week is brought to you by the D.C. Farm to School Network, housed in the Arcadia Center for Sustainable Food & Agriculture, in partnership with schools and other community organizations.

Sponsorship Levels

$250

Mention on our blog
 Tweet shout-out from @dcfarmtoschool
 Name on event website

$500

Mention on our blog
 Tweet shout-out from @dcfarmtoschool
 Black/white logo on event website
 Name on kick-off event program

$750

Mention on our blog
 Tweet shout-outs from @dcfarmtoschool
 Color logo on event website
 Mention in kick-off event program
 Name in photo journal, and copy

$1,000

Mention on our blog
 Tweet shout-outs from @dcfarmtoschool
 Color logo on event website
 Verbal mention at kick-off event and logo in program
 Mention in event press release
 Color logo in event photo journal, and 2 copies
 Color logo on D.C. Farm to School Network website for one year

$2,000

Mention on our blog
 Tweet shout-outs from @dcfarmtoschool
 Color logo on event website
 Verbal mention at kick-off event, color logo in program and on banner
 Mention in event press release
 Color logo in event photo journal, and 3 copies
 Organization description and color logo on D.C. Farm to School Network website for one year

"At the demonstration I learned that if you use vegetables, fruits, or anything in season, it will taste fresh and delicious."

- Tyler Elementary school student, after participating in a chef demo during D.C. Farm to School Week last year

Contact Andrea Northup (203-558-8549 or andrea@dcfarmtoschool.org) to get involved!